Macellum Badger Fund, LLC, a Delaware limited partnership (“Macellum Badger”), Legion Partners Holdings, LLC, a Delaware limited liability company (“Legion Partners Holdings”), Ancora Holdings, Inc., an Ohio corporation (“Ancora Holdings”) and 4010 Capital, LLC, a Delaware limited liability company (“4010 Capital”), together with the other participants named herein (collectively, the “Investor Group”), have filed a preliminary proxy statement and accompanying WHITE proxy card with the Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”) to be used to solicit votes for the election of its slate of highly-qualified director nominees at the 2021 annual meeting of shareholders of Kohl’s Corporation, a Wisconsin corporation (the “Company”).

Item 1: On March 4, 2021, Jim Chadwick, Managing Director, Head of Alternatives & Portfolio Manager at Ancora Alternatives LLC, did a podcast interview with The Deal and his quotes related to Kohl’s Corporation are pasted below:

“Yeah. I think the common theme, obviously, sales-leaseback and all three being retailers. In the case of Kohl's, as was the case with Big Lots, the real estate value was a significant portion of the market cap today. In the case of Kohl's, we believe there's north of $7 billion of real estate value there that could be monetized. And so, I think where it comes into play with retail specifically, I mean it's nothing new per se, but I think what is new is as last several years as retail has fallen out of favor and a lot of retailers are trading at very low multiples, like Big Lots, is trading less than probably three times EBITDA.”

“And so, when you see something like that where you have an asset that is getting effectively no value from the market, oftentimes unknown by the market because the disclosure requirements under GAAP are very limited in terms of what you have to say about your real estate value or term market value real estate.”

“So, here you have a situation where you have a stock that's trading at a really low multiple, and that was true of Kohl's when we started this campaign too. And then, you have real estate value that's a significant portion of the overall evaluation, but most likely not getting any credit from the market in general.”

“And so, it becomes something where, to us, it's an incremental value that can be added here that shareholders can benefit from. I mean, it doesn't have to be used just for buy-backs. It can be used for deleverage. There's a bunch of different opportunities. In the case of Kohl's, I think that pathway remains to be seen, but certainly, the same groups that we've worked with in both Bed Bath and Big Lots are certainly aware and have looked at this Kohl's situation very carefully. And so, we do know that there is interested parties that would like to execute this type of transaction, and the company to-date has done some very limited versions of sales-leaseback, so we'll see where this goes as the campaign goes on.”

“But I think if we were looking at the campaign in pieces, I think the sales-leaseback is the low hanging fruit, the short-term piece that, it is significant, but we're looking at building long-term value. That's a part of it. And the other part of it is just effectively changes on the board level that really oversee the business better, improve the issues that have led to bad performance there for years.”

“And so, even when you look at this, the current slate at Kohl's, Tom Kingsbury, who's actually an ex-employee of Kohl's and then became a runaway success as the CEO of Burlington, he's an all-star in that discount space. And so, having him on our slate here, the same thing. So that's somebody who just knows the business really well who's executed at a really high level, who's widely respected by other investors in the street.”

Item 2: Also on March 8, 2021, the following quote by Jim Chadwick, relating to Kohl's Corporation, from "Activist Investing Today Podcast: Ancora's Chadwick on Kohls, Forward Air" was published by The Deal:

"In the case of Kohl's, as with Big Lots, the real estate value was a significant portion of the market cap today," Chadwick said. "We think at Kohl's there is $7 billion of real estate value that could be monetized."
